

Conservation Commission Certifies Elections, Announces Winners

Tuesday, 25 May 2010

PULLMAN, WA – On May 20, 2010, the Washington State Conservation Commission certified conservation district elections and announced the official winners of those elections.

Certification of a conservation district election means the Conservation Commission has concluded the district substantially complied with published procedures in the conduct of the election. Once the election is certified, the Conservation Commission then announces the official winners of these elections for the office of conservation district supervisor.

Conservation districts provide documentation to the Conservation Commission covering multiple steps in the delivery of local conservation district elections. Conservation Commission staff review all information provided, and may audit on-site election files for compliance. About one-fifth of these annual elections are monitored in person by Conservation Commission staff.

Citizens elected to the office of conservation district supervisor become municipal officers of the conservation district as soon as the Conservation Commission announces official results, and they assume their full duties when they take office at the next regular or special meeting of the conservation district. Each conservation district supervisor serves a three-year term of office.

Unlike most local government elections, conservation district elections are governed by procedures established by the Washington State Conservation Commission through the authority provided in Title 89.08 Revised Code of Washington.

Results of the conservation district elections held in January, February, and March 2010 are listed below. Congratulations to all election winners, and thank you in advance for your service and commitment to conservation!
